Can I Come Too?

Brian Patten
Nicola Bayley

When a tiny mouse goes in search of the biggest creature in the world, she embarks on a large adventure. Along the way, she meets many different animals. Follow their journey in this gentle cumulative tale from a world-renowned author and artist team.
A very small mouse decided she wanted to have a very big adventure.
I’ll go and find the biggest creature in the world, she thought.
By the lake, the mouse met a frog. “Are you the biggest creature in the world?” she asked.

“No,” said the frog. “But it is very brave of you to look for it. Can I come too?”

“Of course,” said the mouse. “Just because we are small doesn’t mean we can’t have a big adventure.”
On a branch overhanging the river, they met a bird made out of rainbows. It was a kingfisher.

“Are you the biggest creature in the world?” the mouse asked.

“I’m a rather small bird,” he said, “but I’d love to see what the biggest creature is. Can I come too?”