A fun and modern feminist twist on the 1985 pop cult film WEIRD SCIENCE

Description:

All 15-year-old Katie Camilleri wants is the perfect first kiss from the perfect guy. So when she and her best friend Libby accidentally cook up said perfect guy in the kitchen (seriously - he's like a long lost Hemsworth brother), things are looking up for Katie and her plan to lose her mouth virginity. But it turns out spontaneously creating a human being (who resembles a golden god) is slightly more complicated than Katie could have anticipated. Will her friendship with Libby survive the test? And will Katie EVER get her first kiss?!

Sales Points:

- From the author of What I Like About Me
- Hilarious feminist twist on a pop cult narrative
- Perfect for fans of Jenny Han and Rainbow Rowell

Author Bio and Residence:

Jenna Guillaume was the editor-at-large for BuzzFeed Australia, where she wrote about very important things like pop culture, identity, feminism, social media, and Chris Hemsworth’s biceps. Previously, she spent more than half a decade in the features department of Girlfriend magazine, editing the sealed section (yes, all those questions are real), and writing about everything from bullying and body image to bad kisses and boy bands. She was also a contributor to Girlfriend Life Hacks, an essential guide to navigating a girl’s completely-awkward-but-totally-awesome teen years.
